

EXPRESS REGRET AT CANCELLATION OF
DUKE'S U. S. TOURAll Interested Parties Officially
Remain Strictly Mum
On the Subject

BEDAUX WAS OBJECTION

Grieving at Collapse of His Plan, Bedaux Waits in Seclusion For Official Word

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6—(INS)—All interested parties officially remained strictly mum today on the Duke of Windsor's postponement of his American trip. Privately, however, regret was expressed at the decision.

Consensus of opinion was that the former British monarch got himself into a "fix" by permitting Charles Bedaux, author of a "stretchout" system particularly repugnant to American labor, to arrange the 37-day tour which was to have started next Thursday, and when labor vociferated a protest, announced the postponement to save Bedaux's face.

Labor leaders unanimously said they were sorry Windsor was not coming to America now, that he had nothing against him or his Baltimore-born Duchess personally, and that their protests against the Duke's proposed study of factories and housing projects in this country hinged solely on labor's violent opposition to Bedaux.

Windsor's decision to postpone the trip indefinitely quickly followed Bedaux's cabled offer to withdraw as herald to the Duke on the tour.

Joseph P. McCurdy, president of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, an A. F. of L. member body which Wednesday "warned" organized labor not to be "taken in by slumming parties professing to help him (Windsor) study labor," said forcefully he had no objection to the tour of the royal couple, adding:

"When the Prince and the Duchess do come to America, they should have their itinerary arranged by someone who has the confidence and good-will of the American working people."

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(INS)—Grieving at collapse of his plan to "guide" the Duke and Duchess of Windsor on an American industrial tour, Charles E. Bedaux waited in seclusion today for a personal message from the former British monarch who suddenly cancelled plans to visit the United States.

In his hotel suite, Bedaux denied himself to all questioners. His associates described Bedaux, former sandhog who became a millionaire industrial engineer by inventing a "speed-up" labor system, as being deeply sorrowful over cancellation of their trip by the Windsors.

As far as was known, Bedaux, whose system has aroused intense criticism in American labor circles, had not yet received a personal message from the Duke advising him the trip to the United States, which was to have begun today, had been abandoned.

Thus the man in whose French chateau the Duke and Duchess were married, and who dreamed of escorting them through America, knows officially of the change in plans only through the chill, formal statement issued by the Duke in Paris.

Bedaux, whose sponsorship of the projected visit of the Duke and Duchess aroused a storm of criticism in the United States among labor elements, retired to his suite after sending a cable to the Duke "begging" and "imploping" to be relieved of his duties as guide and escort on this side of the Atlantic.

Accidentally Shot

Quakertown, Nov. 6—Jacob Bachman, 62, Springtown, was shot and seriously wounded today when his nine-year-old grandson, Donald Gutshall, accidentally knocked over a loaded gun in the Gutshall home.

The weapon discharged, wounding Bachman in the right leg. He was removed to a hospital here, but his condition was regarded as not critical.

National Grange To Meet

Harrisburg, Nov. 6—Rural folks from nearly every section of the United States will converge on the Keystone State Capitol next week for the 71st annual session of the National Grange. Heralded opening of the sessions of the national body on Wednesday will be the 65th annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Grange, which will complete its convention business on Thursday. Delegates to the national body will continue their activity through Saturday. Grange officials estimated that more than 15,000 persons from the farm organizations throughout the country would be here for the meeting.

Young People's Group Has
Its 2nd Annual Banquet

The Bristol Young People's Group, composed of young women and young men from Protestant denominations of the borough, enjoyed their second annual banquet last evening, in St. James' parish house. One hundred and nineteen attended, with John Poulette, president of the group, serving as toastmaster.

Short talks were given by ministers of local churches, these including: the Rev. Andrew George Solla, the Rev. Howard L. Zepp, the Rev. George E. Boswell, and the Rev. James R. Gailley. The toastmaster also called upon John Tomlinson, chairman of the banquet committee, for brief remarks. Mr. Tomlinson presented a gift to the Mothers' Guild of St. James' Church, in appreciation of aid given with the banquet. The gift was accepted on behalf of the guild by Mrs. Warren Thompson.

A minstrel show was presented, interlocutor being Harold Coon; end men, Cyril Heaton and Arnold North; circle: Miss Hillborn, the Misses Edna Hellings, Carolyn Betz, and Alma Holmes; Messrs. Jackson Bauer, John Weik, John Poulette, William Marshall.

FEW "FREAK" VOTES

PROBLEMS OF THE WORLD
COMMUNITY DISCUSSEDRichard R. Wood, Secretary of Friends' Peace Committee, Speaks Here

FOR TRAVEL CLUB

Richard R. Wood, Moorestown, N. J., secretary of the Friends' Peace Committee, Philadelphia area, gave "A Calm View of a Crazy World" when he came before Travel Club members yesterday afternoon as the speaker of the day.

The speaker, introduced to local club women by Mrs. William DuHamel, at the outset of his address explained why it is technically correct to call the present period a "time of crisis," then referred to the growing lawlessness of nations as spoken of in the Chicago speech of President Roosevelt.

"In that speech our president pointed out two lines; by one we and the world would benefit, by the other we would lose. That speech has been interpreted in many ways, but in my judgment the president was pointing us toward the only possible road toward peace."

The fact that people today are living in a world community was pointed out, "and such a fact makes war a world concern," he added. How the failure of a bank in Austria, affected other countries in a monetary way—Germany, France, England, with England eventually going off the gold standard—and the United States also being affected, was considered. "Not only in a monetary way, but in things of the mind and spirit we are also living in a world community," the women were informed. "The crux of the whole problem is the unexpectedness with which the world community developed—and it is merely a by-product of advance in industry, transportation, etc. It was not planned. And we might say of this as one Englishman told me in regard to American jokes. 'The point is arrived at just before I am ready for it.'"

That the world must be organized to maintain order was one of the suggestions given by the speaker. "We cannot impose peace on the world by military power. The problem is rather to provide, instead of by coercion from the top, an organization that will make for orderly and peaceful means of insuring peace, and it must be flexible."

The undercurrent of affairs that upset and change the world was gone into, the women being told that the universe is subject to change. The needs of various nations were considered, the usual method of securing such being by purchase. "Thus we see the importance of trade," Quoting the four keys to peace recently given by one prominent in world affairs, Mr. Wood mentioned them as being arbitration, security, disarmament, peaceful changes.

Touching on the devices that might be employed to deal with excess of raw materials, Mr. Wood informed that "It is not a shortage of raw materials that makes nations go to war. For they can buy such if they have the wherewithal to buy. It is sometimes brought about by the fact that they are not able to establish methods of securing such. Economic co-operation is such a hopeful development, but it brings up the question of the wherewithal to buy. It does not always mean money, but the exchange of goods. Some nations have not been able to establish exchange. And I believe it is the law of nature that if people must choose between war and starvation, they will fight. We

EDUCATION WEEK WILL BE OBSERVED LOCALLY"Parents' Night" To Be Conducted in Bristol High School

ON TUESDAY EVENING

From November 7th to 13th, National Education Association will sponsor the annual "American Education Week." Its purpose is to show the part played by education in the national life, and thus stimulate and foster public interest in education and the schools.

The program provides for a theme "Education and our National Life" composed of seven sub-themes, one for each day of the week. The themes are as follows: Sunday, November 7, "Can We Educate for Peace?"; November 8, "Buying Educational Service"; November 9, "The Horace Mann Centennial"; November 10, "Our American Youth Problem"; November 11, "Schools and the Constitution"; November 12, "School Open House Day"; and Saturday, November 13, "Life-long Learning."

The program to commemorate Education Week will be sponsored by the Bristol high school and the eighth grades of the Harriman building. The program is outlined as follows:

1. A display in Fabian's store window, Radcliffe and Mulberry streets, showing facts of interest about the schools of Bristol, and a display of posters illustrating the seven themes of Education Week. The posters are the work of students in the eighth grades carried on under the direction of Miss Evelyn Fabian.

2. A special program in the English Department which will include compositions written by the pupils on the seven daily themes.

3. A Parents' Night program to be held Tuesday, November 9th, in the Harriman building, by the eighth grades and high school. There will be two class periods of 45 minutes each, lasting from 7.30 to nine o'clock. Invitations will be extended to all parents to visit the schools that evening. They may see what is going on in the school, and also see their children working, and in this way satisfy their interests as to the efficiency of their work.

TRAMP OF MARCHING FEET ON THE INTERNATIONAL STAGE ECHOED THROUGHOUT WORLD DURING THE MONTH OF OCTOBER; INDUSTRIAL PEACE QUESTION

By International News Service

Tramp of marching feet on the international stage echoed throughout the world during four October weeks. Passing of another month in the parade of news found War still rating the headlines. In Chicago, the President of the United States threatened "quarantine" for aggressors as European capitals considered first, the Sino-Japanese situation, and second, the older, troublesome Spanish situation.

During the month, too, there was promise of peace—industrial peace—for the United States as the C. I. O. and A. F. of L., grudgingly, halfheartedly at first, agreed to a conference to mend the break in the ranks of labor. Another kind of calm descended on Washington where the flurry attending the seating of Hugo Black as a Justice of the Supreme Court died with the legal demise of petitions

House-Warming Tendered

PASTOR RECOVERS

The Rev. Francis H. Morrow will again occupy the pulpit of the Bird-In-Hand Methodist Episcopal Church tomorrow morning, after a recent operation. The theme for the morning worship will be "Dynamic Faith" based on a text from the 15th chapter of Matthew, "O, woman great is thy faith, be it unto thee even as thou wilt." The Rev. Morrow's son cancelled an extended trip through the West to rush from Ohio to his father's bedside.

COUPLE ENTER SUIT
CLAIMING BIG DAMAGESMr. and Mrs. George Lynn,
Phila., Start Action to Recover $10,000 Damages

RESULT OF AUTO CRASH

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 6—Claiming damages amounting to $10,000, George W. Lynn and his wife, Ila, a school teacher, of 228 West Durand street, Philadelphia, have begun an action in trespass in the Court of Common Pleas, here, naming Mortimer M. Schlosser and J. Jerome Schlosser, 199 South Tenth street, Newark, N. J., the defendants.

According to a statement of claim, filed in the Prothonotary's office, the plaintiffs were riding in a car, which was operated by George Lynn, on the Lincoln Highway, near Fallington, November 1, when it figured in a collision with a car driven by J. Jerome Schlosser.

The plaintiff, Mr. Lynn, avers that he suffered internal and external injuries which caused him expenditures.

His wife, Ila, who is a school teacher, alleges that in addition to suffering various injuries she was compelled to undergo an operation.

Mr. Lynn avers that his automobile was damaged to the extent of $160.61, and that it depreciated more than $190 in value.

Kings Theatre Guild
To Witness Production

ANDALUSIA, Nov. 6—The Kings Theatre Guild held its regular monthly meeting last evening at the home of Ethel Hartman. Thirteen members were in attendance.

Routine business was transacted which included a favorable treasurer's report from the treasurer, John Ferguson. The statement also indicated that the last production of the Guild was a financial success.

Announcement was made that the Guild will go in a body to Temple University to see the University dramatics club, "Templeplayers," give the production, "Night of January 16th," when it is given later in November.

Negotiations have also been started with Samuel French & Co., whereby the Guild hopes to have royalties on plays reduced so that small units like the Guild can give the plays which are most important. This will give local audiences the best of the productions that have had Broadway runs.

The play which will be given at the annual Christmas entertainment of the Church of the Redeemer was also selected last evening. Guild members have decided to produce "The Shepherd's Story," a one-act nativity play by H. G. Grover. Norman Foster and Mary Hufford have been selected for the parts and Ethel Hartman will direct.

Those present at the meeting last evening included: Norman Foster, Ethel Hartman, Hilda Leversidge, Virginia Murray, Douglas Gittens, George Tibbetts, John Ferguson, Harry Bush, Dorothy Settle, Mary Hufford, Walter Zelinsky, Axel Kleinsorg, and Archie Lummis.

CLASS HAS SOCIAL

Sunday School Class, No. 3, St. James' P. E. Church, taught by Miss Edna Hellings, met Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Marion Luckhardt, Otter street. The affair was in the form of a Halloween party. Doris Shire was awarded a prize for games. Those attending: Misses Ann Pearson, Dorothy Foster, Doris Shire, Lillian Mulholland, Carrie Bailey, Dorothy Strobele.

MARRIAGE LICENSES
ISSUED IN OCTOBER
REACH TOTAL OF 131Over 70% of Applicants Were Non-Residents of The County

TEN FROM BRISTOL

Those Seeking to Wed Came From Eight States
In the Union

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 6—October business at the Bucks county marriage license bureau located in the office of the Clerk of Orphans' Court on the second floor of the Court House, showed a marked pick-up, with a total of 131 licenses granted during the month.

More than 70 percent of the applicants were non-residents of Bucks county, with Philadelphia furnishing the large majority of the visitors, most of whom were married by Justices of the Peace.

So far during the year 1937 a total of 1342 licenses have been granted at the Court House, an increase of 144 over the total for the first nine months in 1936. October's increase this year over the same month last year was 17.

"We are practically a month ahead of the 1936 business," declared Miss Eleanor D. Worthington, Clerk of Orphans' Court today.

Bucks county continues to grow as a popular marriage center. One Justice of the Peace last month married more than fifty couples. They tell their friends and others to come to Bucks County to make their marriage license applications.

Eight states were represented among the applicants during the month of October. The marriage license docket also shows that sixty-five percent of the applicants were between twenty-one and twenty-five.

Bristol, Bucks county's largest borough, furnished 10 applications in October, leading all other communities in the county.

There was no great disparity in ages of the couples granted licenses, only 3 per cent being under 21.

Just about 50 per cent of the female applicants had occupations other than housework. Nine of the female applicants had been divorced and seven of the male applicants were in the same classification.

It is quite noticeable, according to clerks in the marriage license bureau, that big and elaborate weddings are a thing of the past. Most couples applying for licenses here are satisfied with a small wedding, with only a very few attendants. Big weddings are the exception. The civil officers perform more than 75 percent of the ceremonies.

Thirty-one different professions and at least twenty-five different factory and labor jobs were represented among the October applicants.

Play Games at Pleasing
Hallowe'en Party Here

Miss Margaret Allen, 639 New Buckley street, entertained friends at a Halloween party last evening. The guests were masked and the evening was enjoyed playing games. Prize for games was awarded to Betty Kolback.

Refreshments were served to: Dorothy Hellings, Jean Angus, Grace Bigelow, Betty Kolback, Florence Ludwig, Richard Cook, Lawrence Nolan, Eugene Mount.

YARDLEY

The officers of the every-member canvass of the Episcopal parishes in Bucks County met at the St. Andrew's P. E. Church, this week, when the Rt. Rev. Benjamin Kemmerer, Bishop of Duluth, Minn.; the Rt. Rev. W. C. Thomas, Bishop of Southern Brazil; and Miss Caroline Gillespie, North Carolina, gave addresses.

Sixty members of the Junior and Intermediate Epworth Leagues attended a Halloween party in the Methodist Church on Halloween. Mrs. Francis C. Thomas and Mrs. Walter H. Thompson, counselors for the two groups, were in charge. Prizes were awarded for the funniest costume, William Sands; best dressed, Elaine Austin; and hardest-to-guess, Jean Canace.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Brown and daughter, Lorraine, Trenton, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Dilliplane and daughters, Joy Mae and Patsy Ann, motored to Summit Hill recently to visit the Rev. and Mrs. Paul W. Bare.

BABY CHRISTENED

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McCue, 313 Walnut street, was christened in St. Mark's Catholic Church, Sunday, and named Erwinna. The sponsors were Miss Alice McCue and Joseph Burns.

ARMISTICE DINNER

An Armistice dinner is being planned by American Legion Auxiliary of Robert W. Bracken Post, the affair to occur on the evening of Wednesday, November 10th, at seven o'clock in St. Mark's hall. Members of the Post and Auxiliary are privileged to attend.

CANADA CAN DO IT

Canada's total external trade for the current fiscal year will exceed $3,000,000,000 in value, the Department of National Revenue at Ottawa predicts. That will set a new record for the Dominion. The biggest foreign trade year in Canadian history, thus far, was 1929, when the total value was $2,655,000,000.

The Canadian fiscal year begins in March. Exports for the first half of the current year totaled $567,272,780, a gain of 16 per cent over last year. Imports amounted to $421,464,544, an increase of 33 per cent, bringing the total external trade for the first half of 1937-38 to $1,000,000,000.

If the figures for the last six months of the fiscal year 1937-38 were to equal the first six, the total foreign trade would come to $2,000,000,000. But Ottawa experts expect the second half of the year to double the total for the first half. They base this prediction on the fact that Canadian external trade is picking up momentum at a clip of better than 15 per cent a month and this acceleration seems likely to continue.

We hear much of the decline of world trade and the futility of trying to build up that trade to pre-depression levels. Apparently Canada knows a secret, still unrevealed to many nations. Some say the secret is a very simple one—that you must buy abroad if you want to sell abroad.

BOYCOTT THAT WORKED

Not without significance is the news that the weekly food index of Dun & Bradstreet suffered its widest break of this year when it fell six cents to $274 in the last period ended October 26. This was the fifth straight decline and was due mainly to the abrupt downswing in livestock prices.

The Index, at $274, has fallen below its 1936 comparative for the first time this year. A year ago, it stood at $277. This weekly food index of wholesale prices represents the sum total of 31 articles in common use.

The true significance of this item goes back a few weeks to the time when protests against the rapidly rising costs of meat began to make themselves heard, later to take form in a quiet but effective consumers' boycott, along with a protest from retail dealers which made itself nationally prominent by the strike of 5,000 butchers in New York City. Those measures halted the upswing of prices, brought them to a pause, started them on a slow descent.

All of which goes to prove once more that consumers are not so helpless as many have mistakenly held them to be; not so helpless even when they are accorded no protection by a government which still clings to the theory that economy of scarcity with resultant high prices is promotive of prosperity.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1937

King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD—The famous Ziegfeld estate at Hastings-on-the-Hudson will become a suburban hotel. Billie Burke held out for years trying to find a private purchaser, but the property, second only to the Rockefeller domain in the Pocantico Hills, was too hard to dispose of in uncertain post-depression days.

The star eventually gave in to fate when she was finally determined to make California her permanent home.

In steady demand at the studios, she had no other choice. As soon as she finishes "Navy Blue and Gold" at M. G. M., the star will have the selection of several other scripts.

Still, it was a wrench to give up the home where Ziegfeld found success from the worries of Broadway, where red-haired Patricia, now grown up, played in a $20,000 doll house and where the garage, at one time, lodged six Rolls Royces.

In their absorption with the romantic goings-on of Hollywood youngsters, the gossips are overlooking a serious item—Dorothy Peterson and Tom Kilpatrick, the Paramount writer.

Disney gets all the breaks. Stokowski, who DID find time for other things than Garbo, went overboard when he heard that Mickey Mouse would cavort in a cartoon version of Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice." The famed conductor said he'd like to lead the orchestra for the picture. At the time, Disney thought it was all talk, but it seems that Stokowski was serious. So don't be surprised if a two-reel cartoon starring the famous rodent has a musical score supplied by the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra.

Hear that Drew Eberson, assistant director at Warners and No. 1 man in the life of Glenda Farrell, will open an architectural office on the famous Sunset boulevard strip. Eberson learned the craft at the University of Pennsylvania and has been socking away his salary against his present venture. First job will be designing a house that Glenda will build in the valley—not for herself but for an investment.

Just had a personal experience with the fan who is trying to impersonate Fay Wray. Call came into the office from a woman (cultured voice) who introduced herself as the star's secretary, "Miss Wray," she said, "is still having trouble with impostors. She wonders if you could do anything about it." Then another woman came on the phone who said she was Fay herself. It was a poor imitation of the star's voice and the whole thing was given away by the fact (known to us) that Fay has no secretary.

Before we could have the call traced, the connection was broken. What's the idea? It seems so stupid.

The movies are so arduous. In the Crosby picture, known temporarily as "The Badge of Policeman O'Roon," Beatrice Lillie was supposed to get a massage by 230-pound Andy Devine. His efforts, plus a breakaway table that collapsed at the wrong time, sent her to the studio hospital and home for the day.

Even if Noel Coward did call her temperamental, she probably longs for the Coward subtleties.

Chatter. . . Jackie Coogan has hired Irving Jaffe to teach him to be a speed ice skater. . . Eddie Cantor and Ida were really swinging it at the Trocadero after the dinner at the Ambassador celebrating the comedian's twenty-fifth anniversary in the show business. . . Nan Blackstone is dedicating meat of her songs at the Swing club to a well-known interior decorator.

. . . Dixie Dunbar, who is as busy as a bee, is smiling currently at Joe Leroy Brown, son of the comedian. . . And you'd better watch the Diana Lewis-Jack Warner, Jr., twosome. . . Carmel Myers will sign a radio contract any minute. . . Chico Marx's daughter, Maxine, made her stage debut in "The Old Maid" at the Pasadena Community Playhouse. . . And Virginia Bruce, in case you are wondering, will not give up her career following her marriage to J. Walter Pober in the spring.

"Beauty's A Charm" by HARRIET HINSDALE

CHAPTER XXII

Lucy Lee felt a little sick with humiliation at what Clyde must be thinking of the way Pearl had treated him. Practically thrown him out of the house . . . and now look at her.

"Yes, and what he doesn't know about motors you could put in a grain's left eye," Loring agreed heartily. "Which is the reason I've got him at work on my new plane. It's a special design and I told the plant manager I wanted Clyde to stick right on the job until it was finished. The very first day I talked with you out there, I got your number, didn't I, Young Fellow?"

"I reckon motors are about the only thing I do know," Clyde admitted. "That's why I got a job in the factory when I decided to stick around California for a spell, instead of going back home." He glanced at Lucy Lee and she knew the answer was meant for her. Clyde was staying here because of her.

"A new plane?" Pearl exclaimed. "How thrilling! Do tell us all about it, Mr. Loring. I simply adore flying and some day I'm going to pilot my own ship just like Ruth Chatterton does. It must be so exciting!"

As a matter of strict accuracy, Pearl loathed sky riding and the thought of flying her own plane had not entered her head until that moment.

"The most exciting thing in the world!" the actor replied. "My new boat is a knock-out, isn't she, Clyde? A single motored five hundred and twenty-five horse power air-cooled amphibian."

"That means you can land on the ground or the water, doesn't it?" Pearl cooed.

"Yeah, and her landing speed is fifty-two miles an hour. She cruises at about a hundred and ten to a hundred and fifty and she's just about the prettiest baby in the air, isn't she, Clyde?" Vernon beamed proudly.

"Jeez, but this sauerkraut is swell. Waiter, I'll take another load, if you've got some handy."

"Tomorrow's headlines," Don Ames chuckled. "Bruce Loring Starts Sauerkraut Fad. Wish I owned a cabbage farm!"

"Clyde and I are on our way out to the plant now," Loring went on with all the enthusiasm of a small boy over a new red wagon. "I want to look at a new gadget we may use. Clyde put me next to it. And believe me, when I take off on my hunting trip to Mexico at the end of this picture I'm working on, that gorilla is going with me if I have to kidnap him. He just talks to a motor like a mother to her baby and it understands. No kidding. He's terrific!"

"We always said Clyde was the cleverest thing with engines, didn't we, Lucy Lee?" Pearl glanced at the girl then went on without waiting for a reply. "You must come to the house often, now that you're staying in Hollywood, Clyde. We simply hated to see you go back to Louisiana so soon."

"Thanks," Clyde answered.

Lucy Lee avoided meeting his eyes.

"So you're going hunting, Loring?" Don Ames remarked. "What a peach of a publicity story that is."

"Migosh, I'm not looking for publicity!" exclaimed Loring. "Nix on dishing out any dope on it, Ames. What I'm trying to do is make a quiet sneak—if you know what I mean," he grinned. "So can the chatter, will you?"

"Oh, sure, if you say so," answered Ames. "I was afraid of that."

Loring finished the slab of French apple pie which had followed the ham hocks and sauerkraut and was ready to leave. Pearl of course, did not miss the chance of being seen walking out with him. As they went out a dozen people hailed them, and at least that many had casually stopped at their table to speak to Bruce Loring as he lunched.

Among them were two western editors of national fan magazines, both of them women famed for their impressionable natures. One, because she knew men so well—the other because she knew them so little.

"That's why I like to lunch at the Derby," the actor remarked with a flicker of the irresistible Loring dimple in the dark brown Loring cheek, as they came out into Vine Street's brilliant sunshine. "It's such a nice, quiet little joint, where a mug like me can eat in peace!"

The sleek black car in which he still took such pride was waiting at the parking station next door. As he and Clyde got in Pearl was again urging Clyde to "come and see us soon."

"I notice you do your own driving," Don Ames remarked as Loring grasped the wheel in muscular hands.

"Sure I do. What's the fun owning a swell hack like this if you're paying some other guy to make it go?" Loring chuckled. "Say, when I was broke—and that was practically all my life up till now—I often used to hang around garages just for the kick I got out of seeing the boys working on some imported bus like this. Once in a while they'd even let me take one out for a spin—and what a thrill that was! Well, so long, folks. We'll be seein' you."

As they drove off, Pearl turned on Lucy Lee. "Of all the dumb dories! Why didn't you say something when I was asking Clyde to the house?"

"I just couldn't. I knew he was thinking of what happened when he did come, before."

"You would bring that up!" Pearl turned from her in annoyance. "Can you imagine that lame brain of a Clyde Dixon traveling around with Bruce Loring?" she demanded of Don Ames as they got into their own car and drove away. "Taking it all as a matter of course. I don't believe he even has sense enough to know what a break he's getting!"

"You're wrong there, Lady," Ames replied. "Just because the Dixon lad isn't so strong on the chatter is no sign he's a total loss when it comes to gray matter. Maybe the fact that he doesn't lick Loring's boots is one reason he's acres high with him."

They heard nothing more from Clyde and Lucy Lee hardly knew whether she was sorry or glad. Yet on the whole she felt relieved. Pearl's flagrant insincerity was too awful and she did not want him to think her equally guilty.

Then Neville came back to town full of energy and enthusiasm for his next picture, scheduled to begin almost immediately.

"They said in the New York office my first picture was not as lousy as they expected," he explained. "Which means of course that it is pretty damn good and they think it's going to make a lot of money. So I'm to have a whack at this. Great story and a couple of swell parts for you girls."

Pearl and Lucy Lee were lunching with him in the studio café. Many people hailed Preston, congratulating him on the picture, rumors of the New York office's favorable reaction being current. Everyone seemed acting a rôle, in the odd fashion of studio cafés.

Cans of Flavor

So plentiful were tomatoes this Fall that Federal economists estimated that more than 2,000,000 tons were commercially canned.

Many cooks prefer straining the juice from canned tomatoes—either the store or home-canned variety, and seasoning to taste, rather than buying prepared tomato juice cocktail. Of course, excellent clear tomato juice may be purchased and thus seasoned.

Tomatoes that have been strained are convenient to use in many dishes. They may be scalloped, or combined with ground meat, used in soups, or many dishes with left-overs.

Tomato juice cocktail seasonings include salt, pepper, paprika, Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice, savory salt, or onion juice. Some folks even like a few grains of mustard.

FALLSINGTON UPSETS DOPE; TIES LANGHORNE

By Louis Tomlinson

FALLSINGTON, Nov. 6.—Fallsington High School students and followers went wild with joy in the early part of the fourth quarter in their game with Langhorne High here yesterday afternoon. And they had reason to go mad for when Walt Wasurka went over the center of Langhorne's line from the latter's one yard line, it was the first touchdown of the year scored by a Fallsington player. And though it wasn't enough for the Farmers to win the verdict, it nevertheless, earned them the noble distinction of holding the stronger and heavier favored Langhorne eleven to a 6-6 tie.

When the referee went through the customary motions to signify that Walt had successfully crossed that last white line to tie the score, the home town band started whooping it up with a striking tune, while the crowd thoroughly went wild with excitement and joy. It was the first and only time this year they had a chance to cheer for their favorites and they really made up for all the lost time, the time they had to hold back and just hope.

Mike DeRisi's proteges began their drive late in the third period, a sustained drive of 55 yards, during which time they made four of their five first downs garnered in the final half.

ANDALUSIA ELEVEN TO PLAY HOMESTEAD GRAYS

Joe Diamanti's Andalusia Green Wave will attempt to make it six straight tomorrow afternoon when it battles the Homestead Grays on the State Road gridiron. Diamanti is depending on his same lineup to annex the triumph.

In the line he has Juengheim, Cunningham, Crummer, Rankin, Parker, Carter and Robinson. The back will be Lange, McMahon, Girard and Chapman.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

FIRST AUTO RACE

PARIS—(INS)—The first automobile road-race, 78 miles from Paris to Rouen, was run in 1894, de Dion winning with an average speed of 12 miles per hour.

CHEMICAL MIXERS WIN OUT OVER BOILER MAKERS

In the National Bowling League Rohm & Haas won 4 points from Badenhausen with Gilbert high man for Rohm & Haas with 338 and L. Fraul 488 for Badenhausen.

P. P. P. Co. won 4 points from Langhorne. Robinson high for P. P. P. Co. with 478 and Fraser 448 for Langhorne.

Croydon Inn won 1 point from Amoco to make a tie in the League for first place between Wilson's and Amoco, the Wilson team winning four points from Spencer.

In the match between Wilson's and Spencer Mike Kundire hit 592 and McGill 529 for Spencer.

The Big Red Meets the Indian

The team of Fred Hollingsworth and Bill Hutchinson, who are in great part credited with having brought Dartmouth to its present high standing, will have their hands full with a powerful Ithaca team. Fighting to regain for Cornell some of its early season grid eminence will be Leventry and Gildersleeve.

RECS' HOCKEY TEAM TO PLAY NEW BRUNSWICK

Tonight the Bristol Hockey Club will travel to New Brunswick to play the "McNallys" of that city. The contest between these two clubs has always been an exciting one, and the coming conflict promises to be another "thriller."

The series between the two clubs is even, with each club having won two games. The "Recs" however, are given the edge, considering their surprise victory over the Posttown "Sparrows" a few weeks ago.

MORRISVILLE TIGERS TO OPPOSE ST. ANN'S ELEVEN

Expecting to rebound from its defeat of last week, the St. Ann's A. A. eleven will line up against the strong Morrisville Tigers tomorrow afternoon on the local field, Jefferson avenue and Garden street. A large crowd is expected and the opening kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

Coach "Bill" Dougherty's minions lost a thriller to the Sellersville Green Jackets last week, the latter scoring twice within the final five minutes of the tilt. Bad passes from center and fumbles in the backfield were the main cause of the St. Ann's set-back.

Dougherty drilled his proteges three times this week and feels certain that there will be very little fumbling against the Tigers. He will use the following in his starting line-up: Ends, Conti and Canone; tackles, Kornstedt and Gullatto; guards, Proby and Brown; center, Accardi. In the backfield will be "Sage" Sagolla, "Teddy" Tosti, "Sammy" Ross and "Aussie" Bone.

Morrisville has one of the strongest teams to represent that borough and is out to give the Doughertymen a defeat. Manager Jack Scullin's team has been playing most of its games away and has three victories tucked under its belt.

Tramp of Marching Feet Echoed Throughout October

and phosgene gases, supposedly barred in "civilized" wars.

Spain streets rolled red with blood as the "little war" progressed. Heavy fighting was renewed on three fronts and Madrid where battling has been desultory once more rang to the scream of shells and thundering bombardment. Insurgents concentrated on wresting Gijon from government forces. A British destroyer patrolling the Spanish coast was fired on by a "pirate" submarine and for a lighter touch, American flier Harold E. Dahl doomed to die by Franco forces after capture, was given a reprieve because his pretty blonde wife sent her photograph and a plea for clemency to the insurgent chief.

England, indignant at the scant attention paid her protests by Japan on the method in which the China campaign is being carried out, approved sale of British-made planes to China. To her troubles was added the fatal shooting of Lewis Y. Andrews and a British constable at the Anglican church in Nazareth. Andrews was district commissioner of Galilee. The British Labor Party overwhelmingly downed a proposition to unite with the Communist party. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh renewed lease on his Eng-be stepped up to ward off a graver situation than "present commercial deficit of the country."

Elsewhere news events covered wide territory. In Russia firing squads disposed of "obstructionists" in quantity lots. At Beirut, Syria, U. S. Consul General Theodore Marriner was shot to death by a young Armenian who thought he had been refused a United States visa—he hadn't, but the letter had gone astray.

The White House

Off to Seattle went President and Mrs. Roosevelt to see their daughter as Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black sailed from England. Some saw it as coincidence that the president would be in the west when Black reached Washington. Others, among them Rep. Hamilton Fish (R) of New York, viewed it as "running away."

Balanced budget was seen by the president for the next fiscal year as he explained his national planning program. Standing near big Bonneville Dam (cost $75,000,000), in Oregon, Mr. Roosevelt defended such projects as spending for peace rather than on armaments "as many other nations do."

Non-listener was the president to Justice Hugo Black's broadcast statement that "I was a member of the Ku Klux Klan." There was no radio in the car in which the president was riding when Black spoke.

Three chats, one from the White house fireside and call for a special session of Congress wound up the four-week period in the headlines for the president. His Chicago speech seeming to head the United States into key position in peace enforcement alarmed, angered World Court and League of Nations foes, brought cues of forcing war. Came a second speech tending down the vigorous thrust of the first. During the Wilson years, the president reported, "I learned much of what to do but I also learned what not to do." Third radio speech came immediately following the special session call. In it Mr. Roosevelt indicated resumption of the crop control, wages and hours and government reorganization fight. Was silent on the Supreme Court.

The Government

Parity prices, original goal of the administration for farm products, was abandoned and substitution of a program to restore purchasing power to farmers such as they had "in the fifty years before the world war" was the new goal according to Secretary Wallace.

Bench was Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black who returned from his European vacation calmly reported "I was a member of the Ku Klux Klan," and took his seat in the nation's highest court to hear arguments against his seating and see them refused by the court.

Food for thought for the administration was Gov. Alfred E. Landon's radio broadcast to the nation in which the 1936 Republican presidential candidate urged more action for Congress, less for the chief executive.

WPA slash of names from the work lists amounted to more than one million in the year, it was announced.

Labor

Rebuke for Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins by indirect method started this four-week period of labor activity. Breaking precedent of many years, the American Federation of Labor failed to invite the Secretary to its annual convention. Alleged tendency of the Secretary to favor the Committee for Industrial Organization lay (unofficially) behind the unoffered invitation.

Pulpit for A. F. of L. President William Green during the month, and an excellent one, was the rostrum at the American legion national convention in New York. Green urged alliance between the two organizations to fight Fascism, Nazism and Communism.

Refused by the Maritime Commission were demands of the unions for $250 bonus to members sailing in Far East and Mediterranean war zone waters, but $50 bonus to crew members of government-operated ships was granted.

Demand on 14 points were made by the Ford Brotherhood on Ford Motor company. General Motors Truck workers in Pontiac delayed a threatened strike pending arbitration efforts. Chrysler Corporation employees voted to seek higher wages.

Back to work went A. F. of L. teamsters in San Francisco after settlement of dispute between CIO stevedores and warehousemen they sought to control.

Cold to the National Labor Relations Board and only slightly warmer to President Roosevelt, the 57th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opened in Denver. A message from President Roosevelt was given perfunctory applause. A speech by J. Warren Madden, NLRB chairman, in which he denied that the board favored CIO over A. F. of L., got even less response.

Peace loomed through the murky labor fog when CIO meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., and A. F. of L. at Denver after preliminary sparring got down to brass tacks and agreed that committees of the two would meet to consider a united labor front.

Japan caught it from both labor groups. Both voted boycott of Japanese goods, censured Japan for undeclared war on China.

Miscellaneous

Nineteen died as a United Airlines transcontinental plane struck a peak high in the Uinta Mountains near Salt Lake—by far the worst plane disaster in aviation history. "All Well" the pilot radioed just a few minutes before the plane must have crashed.

Bullets ended the reign of the Al Brady terrorists. In a Bangor, Me., street, Brady and Clarence Shaffer lay still after G-men lead had cut them down. His nose creased by another bullet, Jame Dahlover mourned his tough luck—"I wish I'd gone, too."

Dancing president was George M. Cohan as Boston rocked and reeled to the delicious, cutting New Deal satire wrapped up in three acts of "I'd Rather Be Right" and featuring portable fireplaces for fireside chats and a singing, dancing President Roosevelt.

Born dead, a baby at a Jersey City maternity hospital, came to life after 50 drops of adrenalin had been injected directly in its heart and is now thriving.

Red circle slaying of Frances Hajek, 18, and her boy friend, Lewis Weiss, 20, was New York's newest murder mystery. Parked in lonely Hollis Woods, they were shot to death, on their foreheads, a circle made with lipstick.

Meat strike because of high prices closed 5,000 kosher butcher shops for almost a week.

Bed fence constituted cruelty in the eyes of Mrs. Ethel Brouillard who sued for divorce. The fence was in the center of the Brouillard double bed.

Women sat on a jury for the first time in New York and found a woman divorce defendant guilty of infidelity.

Charlie Ross kidnapping of years ago, came to memory in the kidnapping of another Charles Ross. An 81-year-old retired manufacturer of greeting cards was taken from his car in Franklin Park 15 miles west of Chicago. $50,000 ransom paid but Ross has not yet returned. G-men took over the case.

World Series honors went to the New York Yankees of the American League in another "Subway Series" with the New York Giants, National League pennant winners. Outclassed, the Giants dropped the first three games, won the fourth and dropped the 10th.

Home again was Endeavor I, which challenged for the America's cup in 1934. Coming to the cup tryouts this year Endeavor broke loose from her towing vessel and finished the journey alone. Going home, she duplicated. Two hundred miles east of Nantucket the cable parted in a gale. Endeavor went on alone, after meeting and defeating all the perils of the sea.

Home again, too, were members of the American Legion, who flocked to Manhattan for their annual convention. Close to 6,000 policemen looked the other way as the Legionnaires raised hob in general. The Legion elected Massachusetts lawyer, Daniel J. Doherty as commander, voted resolutions condemning "isms," recommending adequate national defense, criticizing both industry and labor for disregard of legal rites in their disputes.

Deaths

Stage star Osgood Perkins, 45, died of a heart attack in Washington where he was appearing in "Susan and God." Remembered for his managing editor's role in "Front Page" and as gangster chief in "Scarface."

Thriller queen, Ruth Roland Bard, 39, who turned from eluding the villain of the silent screen to real estate and built a fortune, in Hollywood.

Merchant-economist Edward A. Filene, 77, of Boston, of pneumonia in Paris.

Sleeper Patricia Maguire, 31, from pneumonia and still in the coma which made her the "Sleeping Princess" since February 15, 1932.

Dean of Westminster, the Very Rev. William Foxley Norris, 78, after long illness.

Secretary of State for India twice and author of the Palestine partition plan, Earl Peel, 70, at Peterfield, Eng. Athlete Ray Evry, 62, who held world records in standing, high jump and standing broad jump and winner of eight Olympic jumping events, in Douglas Manor, Queens.

Sage of Potato Hill, Edgar (Ed) Howe, 84, in his sleep at Atchison, Kan. A tramp printer in his youth, he died known as philosopher, publisher and author.

Wife of WPA chief Harry Hopkins, Mrs. Hopkins, 37, in Washington.

Treasury chief under President Hoover, Ogden L. Mills, 53, several times suggested as Republican presidential timber, of a heart attack at his New York home.

Office boy who became president of the Borden Company, Arthur W. Milburn, 63, of pneumonia at Baden-Baden, Germany.

Life saver Col. David A. Lyle, 92, whose Lyle gun facilitates rescues at sea, at St. Davids, Pa.

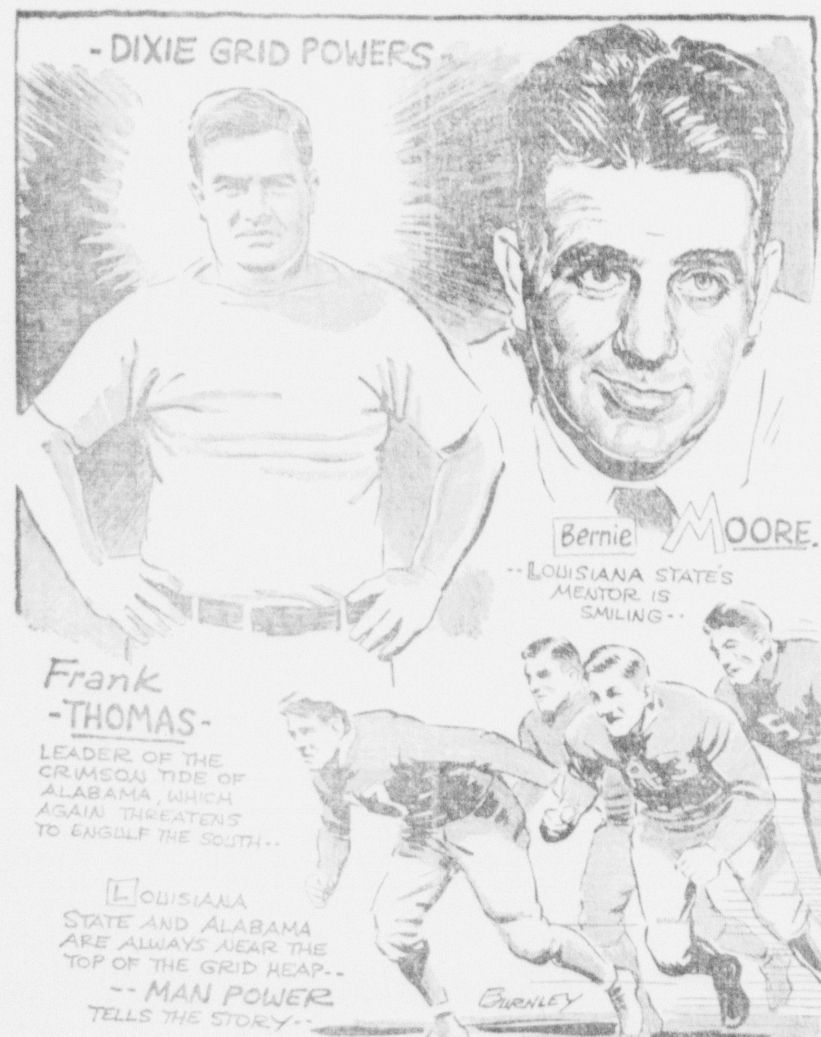

Hall of fame director and one-time ambassador to Italy, Robert Underwood Johnson, 84, in New York.

OLDEST AUTO WORKER

NEW YORK—(INS)—The oldest living employee in the automobile industry is said to be M. J. Murray, who works for Oldsmobile, America's oldest motor car manufacturer. Murray recently celebrated his 90th birthday.

Grid Strongholds of the South

By BURNLEY

Although making football predictions is a foolhardy business, it is about as safe as any grid guess can be to choose Louisiana State and Alabama as Dixie champs of 1937.

The Bayou Tigers have been the most formidable force in their particular part of the South ever since Huey Long engaged Big Jones to put Baton Rouge on the grid map. Big has moved on to other pliskin pastures and the Kingfish has left this earthly sphere, but a never ending stream of mighty football men continue to pour into Louisiana State.

Alabama, with an unmatched Rose Bowl record, boasts perhaps the most impressive record over the years of any Southern team. Under the polished precision coaching of Notre Dame's Frank Thomas, the Crimson tide shows no signs of ebbing this year, but instead promises to engulf Dixie and roll right on to the Rose Bowl again.

Impressive man power is the secret of both these institutions' football success. Even though they lose many of their stars by graduation, as Louisiana State and Alabama did this year, still the supply of talent is so plentiful that the losses are rarely felt.

Other coaches must envy Thomas and Louisiana State's Bernie Moore when they see the grid material at these two grid strongholds of the South. (Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
